ARTICLE APPEARED ON PAGE /

THE NEW YORK TIMES 27 July 1976

Inquiry Is Said to Oppose Prosecuting C.I.A. Aides

By JOHN M. CREWDSON Special to The New York Times

Justice Department lawyers in conceivably have been investigating the Central Intelli-formed of such an effort, the gence Agency's 20-year pro-committee said, is Lyndon B. gram of opening mail between Johnson, but it added that it the United States and Commu-had been unable to find any nist countries have recommend-conclusive record that he had ed against the criminal prose-lever been advised of the cution of agency officials project. involved in the project, a Government official familiar with former President now living, the investigaton said today. told the Senate committee in yers' recommendation, which has been forwarded to Attorney President that the C.I.A. or any General Edward H. Levi for a other Government agency was final decision, was based on the engaged in opening mail withconclusion that "a continuum out the authority of a judicial of Presidential authority', had warrant. rendered the mail openings rendered the mail openings partment lawyers had squared legal, despite Federal statutes their conclusion about the exthat prohibit tampering with istence of continuing Presidenfirst-class mail inside the Unit- tial authority with Mr. Nixon's

The Justice Department, the official said, has in its yearlong examination "found evidence of Presidential knowledge" of the C.I.A. operation, code-named HT Lingual, which between 1953 and 1973 resulted in the opening of nearly 250,-000 letters passing through postal facilities in New York City, San Francisco and else-

The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, which issued a long report on domestic mail openings in April, said that it had found no documentary evidence that any President in the two decades in question had ever authorized the C.I.A. to open letters and photograph their contents.

WASHINGTON, July 26-, The only President who might

Richard M. Nixon, the only The official said that the law- a written response to questions

> Asked how the Justice Dedenial of any such knowledge, the official replied that the de-partment had "looked at more than that [the denial] in "drafting its recommendation.

> He declined, however, to characterize the additional evidence examined by the lawyers.

> Mr. Nixon's purported ignorance of the C.I.A. mail-intercept program was a main point at the Senate committee's hearings, and the committee staff rebuked some of Mr. Nixons' aides for having advised him in 1970 that such coverage had been discontinued when it had

> Although Mr. Levi has not yet decided whether to accept the recommendation of his criminal division lawyers not to prosecute those who took part in or had knowledge of the mail openings, the recommendation was believed to increase the likelihood that no C.I.A. employees will face criminal charges as a result of the various investigations of the agency's activities.

> The criminal division, headed by Assistant Attorney General Richard L. Thornburgh, has been sifting evidence of C.I.A. wrongdoing assembled by President Ford's commission set up last year to look into

Mr. Thornburgh has previously recommended to Mr. Levi that no indictments be sought in the C.I.A.'s various plots in the early 1960's against the life of Prime Minister Fidel Castro of Cuba and of the late Congolese leader, Lumumba.

A third major aspect of the Justice Department's investigation has been the 1973 Senate testimony of Richard Helms, the former Director of Central Intelligence, that his agency had not tried to pass money secretly to opponents of Salvador Al lende Gossens, the late Chilean President, and had not been involved in tracking domestic opponents of the Vietnam War.

Later Inquiries Cited

Subsequent investigations of the C.I.A. established, however, that the agency had financed some of Mr. Allende's Chilean opponents before his death in 1973, and that the agency's Operation Chaos had led to its compilation o 10,000 files relating to antiwar protesters in this country.

But the Government official said that the Justice Department lawyers had encountered difficulty in establishing that Mr. Helms, in testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on his appointment as Ambassador to Iran, a post he still holds, had knowingly perjured himself.

Mr. Helms had told the committee, and other Congressional panels, different things at different times, the official said, adding that the odds that Mr. Helms would ever be confronted with a perjury charge were now "sixty-forty against."

The Justice Department is also investigating the C.I.A.'s involvement in some scattered instances of electronic eavesdropping in antiwar demonstrations here in May 1971;

But the official described the C.I.A.'s role in those surveillances, indicating that the agency had done no more than to supply eavesdropping equip-ment to various law-enforcement agencies. He added that it was no yet clear that the surveillances were illegal and the agency's domestic operations and material assembled of any indictments arising from Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/02/22 : CIA-RDP90-01208R000100240009-8